

COMMUNAL VIOLENCE : A Result of Weakness of Secular Tendency.

Rajeev Ranjan

Communalism is extremely formidable social problem of India. In contemporary India, There is no social problem which has parallel size in comparison of communalism. India is a country of pluralistic society and different religion .So it is necessary all religion should have respected place in the Constitution of India as well as Indian society. The concept of 'secular' in fact first used in Europe where church had complete control over all type of properties and nobody can used property without consent of Church. Some intellectuals raised their voice against the practices. These people come to be known as secular that means "separate from Church" or "against the Church"<sup>1</sup>. In literal political thought secularism means the state has no religion. But in Indian context where it is the country of different religious communities, sects and caste, and in their political figure, the data of majority and minority are also exist,so in our country there must be especial vision on the concept of secularism . If secularism will be failed then communal violence will be taken place.