

Population Effect On Resources Utilization In Patna Division

Amit Kumar Rajan

Human resources are one of the best resources of the world, because “Men develop and utilize all the natural resources of any country. They help skilled human power for the production of agricultural output, industrial goods, trade transport, etc.” Men utilized several resources of a country such as Land, water, soils, vegetation, Animals, minerals etc.” Thus human resources (Population) are important resources of a geographical study of a country. “Population is the main geographical factors, elements and resources also of a country. It helps the economic and cultural as development of any country.” The primary productive force of human society as a whole, is the workers the working people”. Patna division has only two important resources : “the fertile alluvial plain and large population size and the development of the study region entirely depends upon scientific use of the land and proper development of human resources”. The fertile land of the study area is not suitable for intensive use in the natural form because of the problems of flood, lack of irrigation facilities, lack of other agricultural infrastructure etc, in considerable areas and only limited areas provide ideal condition for varied use of the land. Similarly large population size also faces the problems of poor health, high growth rate, lark dependency on agricultural activities, poor participation in non-agricultural activities, mass people living in rural areas, etc.