

Dimension of sustainable development and Environmental Legislation in this regard

Dr Sarita kumari

The UN world commission on Environment and Development (W.C.E.D) Defines sustainable Development as the “Development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generation.” Although development is usually discussed in relation to developing countries, the concept of sustainable development in fact applies to all countries of the world including the development requires economic development, Environmental development and human development that must meet the needs of the present without compromising sustenance of the future.